“ Jeanne, I remember you fondly as a beautiful blonde haired girl who was our neighbor in Rudyard, a girl who was part of a close and loving family. As I have experienced with my own child, so many of our wonderful children, family, and friends aren't ever with us long enough, yet sometimes it may be their departure from us that can be their only course to peace. So, sadly, those of us left behind can only hope you know we cared about you and wish your spirit comfort and rest at last.

“ Jeanne, words will never describe the pain of your passing. Over the years it has been such a blessing to have you in my life. When I started taking care of you I never imagined a unbreakable friendship would emerge. I loved you so much. You were such an amazing person. I will always hold you in my heart. I will always cherish the talks we shared over the years. The wise advice you gave me. The funny jokes were great. I loved your smile when I walked into the room. The "I love you s" are missed. I miss you talking about Harry Potter and me being clueless. I find some comfort knowing you are with your mom, dad and Patti. I love you so much Jeanne and this world will never be the same for a pure soul is gone. Love you always Your cricket

“ Dearest Jeannie, I speak to you in the hopes that you might just hear my words. The loss of you is unbearably painful to me. You were a huge part of my life. We shared many hours over the years spent in conversation, both serious and silly. We tried to solve the woes of the earth, probably unsuccessfully. But we did try. You were given more than your share of trials, which you faced with strength and courage. You were incredibly bright, your mind a virtual encyclopedia. You were clever, witty, and funny. We were always laughing. You were creative. You wrote songs and poetry. Really good songs and poems. I have been honored to be part of your life. Now, my mind's eye sees you with your mother who was everything to me, you father, a gallant gentleman, both who always were welcoming to me. And then you who welcomed and shared your life with me. How I will miss you. Travel safely, darling girl. I love you.
