“ When I was in the Soo in September I had the joy of reconnecting with Wayne and to meet his wife Symantha.

I had mentioned that I was looking for one of those green and black plaid or red and black plaid CPO jackets from the '70s. A day or two before I had to return back to California we were out at Wayne's niece's (Amber) place and just before we left in separate cars Wayne gave me a red and black plaid CPO jacket he had said was in his closet for a while and didn't fit him.

I gave him a hug and was so grateful and so touched by the fact that he had heard this from a short conversation and that he acted on it and gave me such a lovely gift.

There are so many others who will present Wayne Morley in loving and caring ways much better than I can, but I will never forget that one moment when he just took a single comment and made it into a gift that I will cherish for the rest of my life.

I love you Wayne.
